Security has always been a highly contested concept in both politics and academia, but never more so than during President Trump's first year in office. Dr. Bruce Bagley will trace the key changes in U.S. national security thinking over the 21st Century from Bush through Obama to Trump and discuss the major security challenges the U.S. faces at the outset of 2018.

Dr. Bruce Bagley is a Professor in the Department of International Studies at UM. He has served as a consultant for the United Nations, the U.S. government and several governments in Latin America, on issues of drug trafficking, money laundering and public security. His current research focuses on U.S.-Latin America relations, with an emphasis on drug trafficking and security issues. Dr. Bagley is the author and editor of more than 20 books.
